

Dr Hani Ragab Hassen

I am standing for election to Senate because I believe I can significantly contribute to the development of the University as a global pioneer institution.

I was an academic in UK for 8 years before joining Heriot-Watt Dubai in 2015. This gives me a unique insight into the challenges and opportunities that arise from operating a global university. Furthermore, during my time at Heriot-Watt, I have been an active member of several university and school committees, including the academic council and the university leadership forum. My current roles include being the associate director of learning and teaching and the director of MSc Network Security.

If I am elected, I will do my best to promote the university's values and will actively seek views of MACS colleagues in order to be as representative of our school as possible.
